EVA DANTY KOUKA

Eva Danty Kouka is Chief of Programs for Tostan. In this role, she directs the various aspects of field operations including program and curriculum development, implementation at the country level, and ongoing monitoring, evaluation, research, and learning. Before joining Tostan, Eva was Global Program Officer at the Ford Foundation where her grant making supported government transparency and accountability initiatives and civil society efforts to promote political, social and economic rights.

Eva's past experience also includes serving as Regional Program Officer for 11 years with the West Africa Regional Office of Oxfam in Dakar, Senegal. She has extensive experience collaborating with senior government officials, community leaders, private sector partners, civil society, and donors to effectively promote human rights, gender equality, youth leadership, natural resource governance, the control of small arms proliferation, and peace building.

Eva studied law at Gaston Berger University in Saint-Louis, Senegal, earning both a bachelor’s and master’s degree. She pursued additional training from The Hague Academy of International Law in The Netherlands, the Institute of International Public Law and International Relations in Thessaloníki, Greece, and also in the U.S. at Columbia University in New York, and the Harvard Kennedy School in Massachusetts.
